

The New Resonance of Relationship

Love is not experienced in the giving and receiving. It is experienced in the space between. Giving and receiving, the moving of energy, is only a function of the initiation of will in our dimension. Love, in its purest state, is a simple matter of Being – emanating, radiating the core essence of your true identity. It is not in the flow that you experience love – it's in the silence.

So many times I have referred to Love as something that can only be given. And, the word “give” often implies the idea of need in our consciousness. Love only recognizes itself (no matter the form) in its unadulterated, divine blueprint. Therefore, in reality, love sees no “lack.” It simply acknowledges and mirrors the truth of every condition, person, place and thing back to itself. Love is a real-ization of what is. To be the emanation of love is not the act – but rather the state of giving...a state of gratitude and surrender to what is real.

This concept is a 180 degree paradigm shift from the old definition of love and if applied, entirely alters the landscape of all relationships. During the next hundred years, conscious beings will begin creating new mating rituals because there will exist a new form of love which does not experience or emulate control. It will be a different dance. It will be a dance between sovereign beings who wish to experience the reflection of love in form.

Those of you involved in these holy relationships now are jumping back and forth between the old paradigms and the new possibilities – and that's to be expected. However, the new manner in which you begin to relate will imprint upon the consciousness of all humanity, because we are all One. So, take your new role and your response-ability seriously. No doubt you have already found yourselves humbly asking assistance from higher sources more than once.

You have been learning that the union of the Twin Flame energies creates a heart womb in which the substance of love is multiplied and can be used for any purpose. It can be shot like a laser beam to its intended object or it can also be a constant state of emanation that can envelope the entire planet. At the center of your precious heart is the holy grail that can literally pour light into the earth's energetic system, reviving and empowering all life, as well as yourself.

It will cause everything to begin to vibrate at a higher frequency, and this will assist all humanity in the upcoming shift. As we all know, we have but a limited window of opportunity before us to bring about the significant changes we desire in ourselves, our relationships, and the world. Those of you on the leading edge of the heart field have accepted a cosmic responsibility to act as stewards for humanity and this precious earth - to help facilitate the most important passage across a threshold for humanity in recorded history.

And all that starts with you and your relationships. Where are you holding back love? Are you compromising your own hopes, dreams and aspirations? Are you stingy with the love you share with others? Do you think some people are OK and deserving of your love, while others are clearly flawed? By acting with unconditional regard, loving kindness and nonjudgmental acceptance, you can effectively act as a beacon of radiation of pure divine love to every aspect of God evolving upon this planet.

Rise every day and consciously, deliberately declare that you will lead by example.

“Every individual who becomes a clear and undistorted channel for eternal love into these times offsets a thousand who remain locked in the dissolving values of the old.”
